GOOD STEADY WORK DID IT. How the Senators Captured Another Game From the Newarks.

It took a steady up-hill fight for the Senators to defeat the visitors from Newark yesterday. 6 to 5, but they were equal to the emergency, and it was with great satisfaction that the 800 spectators saw them crawl out of the small hole undoubtedly be necessary to greatly in which they were apparently permanently enlarge the facilities of the establishin which they were apparently permanently fixed at the start. The game was won by clever, building would be required. There is already daring base running and the working of ail the points of the sport. Phillips and Nicholas had that will give an additional building to the a good deal to do with the victory, working like a machine, striking out seven men and keeping the hits of the opposing batters well scattered after the first inning. Sullivan and Childs, with better support, might have won the game for Newark, as the Statesmen did not hit the be coined at once, but that it shall be made ball as hard as they might. Whistler struck into dollars as soon as practicable, out twice, but so did Fields, the great big home-run hitter of the other team, so the thing was about even. Manager Ted again tried the out this did not work, and he was taken out after the first inning and Jordan substituted. Riddle's work at second was first-class. He caught three very high flies on which a great deal depended, and in each case he let the ball bound out of his hands before gripping it finally. The first time that he did so the specshivered and said that it was a close call. The second time they laughed and said that it was very odd. The third time they yelled with delight and hinted at a desire on the part of the nimble Jack to make what is popular called "grand stand" catches. Smith, the visitors, did the best work. He covered his position at short for all that it was worth. making several very fine stops and throws. Four men he put out at second and came near catching the runners at first. Nicholas led in the batting with a double and two singles. Bird secured a triple and a single. HOW THE GAME WAS WON.

The majority of the runs were made in the first inning. Washington secured two on a single by Eader, a sacrifice by Gleason and a three-base hi! by Bird, who scored on a passed ball. Both Whistler and Underwood struck out. After Johnson had struck out Gilbert, McDermott and Fields each hit for a base, Dooms for two on a scratch, the ball getting between the sun and Underwood's eyes, and then Mansell for one base, four runs resulting. After this no one scored for four innings, a visitor being left on third in the fourth inning. Each side made one in the sixth. Gleason got his base on balls and stole, and after Bird had had the hard luck to send a pretty line fly right into Johnson's hands and Whistler had struck out, Jordan reached first on balls and then Nicholas made a two-base hit into right field, Gleason scoring. Newark's run was made on a hit by Mansell, a steal and a passed ball, and a hit by Sullivan. The score was tied in a very neat manner in the seventh. Washington mak- Meadows; $2,000. A. E. Neither side scored in the ninth, although Bird reached second on a hit and a steal and Sullivan third Washington made 11 hits and 4 errors and Newark secured the same record. Mahoney umpired very well again, his decisions being sharp and accurate and his discipline being of the best. He is by far the most satisfactory umpire that has been here for many a day. UNCLE SAM'S DOLLARS.

If Free Coinage Prevails the Printing Bureau Will Have to be Enlarged.

Should the free-coinage provision in the pending silver bill pass the House and get by the President the result is going to be a tremendous increase of work in the Treasury De-

The bill as it stands at present provides for the deposit of bullion at the mints and the payeach new advertisement therein is as well ment therefor of its market value in a check worth reading as any other department of the upon the Treasury. This will be payable in silver certificates to be issued by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and here it is that the pressure will come. The bureau is now working under pressure to meet the demands or the treasurer. and it is difficult to keep the department fully supplied.

> There is, of course, a good deal of specula tion in any estimate of how much of an in-crease the new measure will make in the coin production of the mints, or whether or not there will be any increased presentation of bullion, but it is thought at the Treasury that the passage and approval of the bill will result in an enormous increase, that the silver will be poured into the mints in a perfect deluge. THE VAULTS.

This will undoubtedly produce a much heavier output of silver coins than at present. As these have to be stored in the vaults of the Treasury and subtreasuries this phase of the question will be a serious proble . The Treasury has almost reached its limit of capacity as a storehouse for wealth, there being a margin of about ten or fifteen millions that may yet be stowed away in nooks and

The experience of the treasurer with the great new vault under the north court of the building will probably deter him from permitting another vault in such a place. The roof has always been leaky and the vault has been in a constant state of dampness ever since its completion. There is plenty of room for more vaults in the building itself, but in placing them there it would become necessary to provide places elsewhere for the stores of paper and other goods that are stowed away in the sub-basement.
